Mills May Get Short.

Free Lance.

It is barely possible that the cotton mills of this state will be short on cotton during the month of April unless there is a decided let up in the stringency on the staple, says the Columbia Record. Just at present, according to a well versed cotton buyer, all o Just at present, according the cotton in movement is that which has already been contracted for aud has been in the warehouse. The far-mers as a rule are holding to all they can, although occasionally there is a small amount turned loose. According to figures; carefully gathered the mills will need about 250, 000 bales in the next thirty days, which are now in sight, and this may result in the price going to within a few points of nine cents. Of course this opinion is subject to change on account of conditions over which the mill men have no control. A rise of a few points may re sult in enough cotton being released to relieve the situation but this is regarded as improbable. At present the mills in this state are well supplied, but the mil.s in Georgia and Alabama are said to be considerably short, resulting in higher prices being paid there than prevail here.

An officer in the South Carolina branch of the southern cotton association was seen this morning and asked about the conditions. He said that cotton would not reach ten centor at least nine and a half yet, but he did not think that the prices would remain steady. There is an enormous quanity of the cotton yet to be adcounted for and while much of it is in the warehouses there is a lot held by the farmers. Some of this will depreciate in value on account of poor storage facilities and exposure, and the farmers are coming to the banks nearly every day for advances on cot-

Fifty years ago the Supreme Court of the United States gave the follow-ing delivereance in favor of laws safeguarding the Sabbath rest: "Laws setting aside Sunday as a day of rest are upheld, not by any right of the government to legislate for the promotion of religious observances, but to protect all persons from the physical and moral debasement that comes from uninterrupted labor. Such laws have always deen deemed beneficial and merciful laws, especially to the poor and despondent' to laborsrs in our factories and workshops, and in the heated rooms of our cities, and their validity; has been sustained by the highest courts of the States."
